1. Go up the Sigottier road until La Montagne hamlet (977 meters). From the hamlet, hike up the valley on the same road (for about 1,5 km) and then take a path ending into a forest one.
2. Once the Pied du Duffre reached (1447 meters), on a lawn strewn with Scots pine, take the path on your left towards Arron's pass.
3. From the pass, you can reach the Duffre summit (1h30 return trip) by crossing through the pastures (2,4 km and 300 meters slope). Take the left path (towards "Le bonnet Rouge") which pass nearby a sheepfold and reach the Saute pass. At the Saute pass (1499 meters), follow the main track which lands on a wide bend until the Pré pass (indicated "col de Champlat", 1501 meters). At the Pré pass (or "col de Champlat"), leave the track and turn left in a small pasture. 50 meters further, turn right and cross a small wood. A path alongside the mountain ridge bypasses the Bonnet Rouge summit on the left and reaches Champlat.
4. From Champlat, a return trip allows you to reach the summit (1645 meters) by following the ridge on the right (1 km and 60 meters slope). Follow the long Serre de la Bouisse ridges. The path ends up between box trees' heaths and the limestone pavement to reach Jardanne rock (1359 meters.)
5. At the Jardanne rock, turn left and go down a beech forest until the Ollagnier source.
6. At the source, follow an undergrowth path on the right leading to Saumane pass.
7. At the pass, turn left on a wide path leading to the Michons. Cross the hamlet and go down the single track until the departure point.

Sigottier Cliff (A)

Overlooking Sigottier village, this cliff is a significant rock-climbing site. Around thirty routes are settled with an initiation area for beginners.

Bonnet Rouge (B)

Highest point of the cliff - 1645 meters high - the Bonnet Rouge is one of the main ridge's summits with the Serre de la Bouisse linking Serre to l'Épine. The quite steep path allowing you to get there is worth the effort because the view is very splendid. From up there, a 360° panoramic view opens on the Dévoluy, the Écrins, the Préalpes hilly area, Ubaye valley and Ventoux Mount.
